A09

A technical drawing of a road layout. A central road, labeled 'A10', runs vertically. It branches into two side roads, one to the left and one to the right. The side roads are shown as thin lines branching off from the main road. The drawing includes several small squares at the junctions, likely representing manholes or specific points of interest. The overall layout is symmetrical around the central road.

A geometric diagram on a white background. A triangle is formed by three black line segments. The leftmost side is vertical. The top side is slightly slanted downwards from left to right. The rightmost side is slanted downwards from top to bottom. A thin black line segment connects the top vertex to the bottom vertex, passing through the interior of the triangle. A small square symbol is at the top vertex where the thin line meets the right side. Another small square symbol is at the bottom vertex where the thin line meets the left side. A short black line segment is drawn perpendicular to the thin line segment near the bottom vertex, with a small square symbol indicating the right angle.
