The diagram shows a corner of a structure. On the left, there is a vertical line. From the top of this line, a diagonal line extends towards the top right. At this junction, there is a small square symbol indicating a right angle. From the point where the diagonal line starts, another diagonal line extends further towards the top right, parallel to the first one. At the junction where this second diagonal line starts, there is another small square symbol indicating a right angle. The area between the two diagonal lines is shaded light gray. The rest of the page is white.
